HOADLEY SAYS FARMERS GOT $338,000,000

Tells Dairywomen of Great Prosperity in Province's Agriculture

CALGARY, Feb. 2.—Tremendous prosperity among the farmers of Alberta, following remarkably successful seasons for grain growers, was held by Hon. George Hoadley, provincial minister of agriculture, and to be partially responsible for the serious decline in dairy production which had been observed in the province last year.

Mr. Hoadley was addressing the manufacturers' section of the Alberta Dairywomen's association twenty-third annual convention. He pointed out that the ease of growing grain compared with the labor of maintaining herds of cattle, facilitated the average farmer and induced him to give greater attention to grain growing whenever prospective were good.

Best Value Up
The high value of wool and beef were also contributing factors Mr. Hoadley said. Farmers who kept crossbred ewes in his time preferred to keep these days and use the milk for their development. During the past year those engaged in agriculture had received $38,000,000 for their work, which was $4,000,000 higher than in any previous year. This had been accomplished in the majority of instances without having recourse to a source which was generally recognized as being laborious and trying.

That the difficulty would be bridged by cooperative effort, was the opinion of the minister, who meting as the present between representatives of the government and manufacturers were of greatest value.

Mr. Hoadley declared that he was strongly in favor of a new policy. The more densely populated districts were more favorably inclined to the adoption of the dairy industry and he believed much good could be done by the adoption of correct methods. He emphasized in this connection the value of using better sires and the more careful selection of cows.

During Wednesday's session three separate sessions were in session and all of them attracted numbers of dairywomen.

Giant Bomb Attempt Fails; Two Arrested

CHICAGO, Feb. 2.—Two men have been arrested following the finding yesterday of a giant powder bomb under the house of William J. Byrne, a defective foundryman who saved the life of Byrne's wife and their seven children.

Those charged for investigation were Dr. Charles P. Bonington, osteopath, and James P. McCallum, former employee of Byrne, both of whom were charged with the attempted bombing.

Algoma Comes Forward With Hunting Stories---They're True

One Engine Chased Moose; Another Killed Four Deer; Indian Ran Wolf Down, Slew It With Axe

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Feb. 2.—Armed only with an axe, Angus Kunkin, a 200-pound trapper, chased a wolf four miles through heavy brush and won the race.

Kunkin was the first dog deer at the snow three years ago, and at the same time captured the distance snowman contest. But the dog deer was easily outwitted by the trapper, who was the first to see the dog deer, according to the story brought back here by V. J. Jewell.

Kunkin, armed with the wolf while following him, ran down a deer through a swamp, killed it and carried it over his shoulder. Several times Kunkin came almost within striking distance. Finally, at the end of four miles, he cornered the thoroughly beaten animal and finished it with his axe.

Hunting his game with railway engines has led to become a popular sport among the Algoma Central railway. Recently an engine ran down a wolf after a half-mile chase in a duffle made by the snow thrown up by the plow.

Trapped another engine, this time on a freight train, came suddenly on a herd of six deer lying on the track at midnight. The crew had no opportunity to stop the train before hitting them. Four of the six deer were killed.

Reports from along the railway are that moose and deer are coming out to the right-way to avoid the deer snow in the bush and numbers of them have been seen by train crews.

Another hunter is reported of a moose which ran before a train for over half a mile near Taber, the engineer having to apply the brakes twice to avoid hitting the animal before it left the track.

BEAUTY TO WED Four Hundred At Willingdon Wage Hot War

Exclusive to Bulletin
VEGEBVILLE, Feb. 2.—There is said to be a scarcity of brides at Willingdon, the new C. P. R. end of steel towards north of here. It all came about as a result of a quiet little dance staged on Saturday night by the Russian farmers of the country.

A large gang of Swedish men engaged in elevator construction work along the new line, and apparently some of their boys attended. Bricks, cross-hairs, two-by-fours, bottles and anything else that could be piled loose came into play.

As the fight progressed both sides were joined by relatives, friends, and although reports vary, it seems that the Russian side was finally successful in securing two and four hundred men from the Russian side of the Russian side of the Russian side.

On the following day a Swede, who had been staying too far from his field, was killed by the Russian side, who were still in the thick of the fight.

It is reported that the Russian side, who were still in the thick of the fight, were still in the thick of the fight.

St. John Was Ten Million for Harbor

OTTAWA, Feb. 2.—Consideration of the request of the Saint John, N.B., harbor commissioners for an advance of money at the present time, has been postponed to the suggested $10,000,000 port development scheme extending over five years was presented to the committee by Hon. P. J. Lacombe, minister of marine and fisheries, at a conference here.

Included in the plan, it is understood, are proposals for the construction of a steel elevator of 2,400,000 bushels capacity with grain conveyor, elevators.

A khaki Campbell duck, owned by H. R. Maxwell, of Lacombe, Alta., has achieved a record of 387 eggs in 365 days.

DOROTHY DIX

Dear Dorothy Dix—I have been married almost seven years and have one child of five. The first time I was a wife I was a little bit of a nervous wreck, but now I am a perfect lady. I have found out that for the most part, a young girl who is going to be a wife, should be a little bit of a nervous wreck, but now I am a perfect lady. I have found out that for the most part, a young girl who is going to be a wife, should be a little bit of a nervous wreck, but now I am a perfect lady.

Answer:
I wish I knew some reliable recipe for rehabilitating a nervous wreck and giving it the flavor and pep that it had when it was fresh, and that I knew some method by which burned-out ashes could be kindled into a flame again.

But I haven't any knowledge of any such cure. There may be cases in which an old love can be revived, as an old rick revived, a torn illness made as good as new, but personally I have never seen it done.

So far as my observation goes, a dead love is the deadest of all dead things, and not all of our prayers and tears and agony of regret will bring it back again. No miracle of resurrection happens to it, even when the one who has loved it would give his or her own life almost to bring back the old feeling again.

When we are disillusioned about a person, we can never see him or her again. No matter how hard we try, we cannot see him or her again. When we are disillusioned about a person, we can never see him or her again. No matter how hard we try, we cannot see him or her again.

It is so hard to keep love, and so impossible to win it back once it has been lost, that it is a pity that wives can never see their husbands as they were when they first met. It is a pity that wives can never see their husbands as they were when they first met.

In your case you admit that you were a selfish wife who did not even make your husband comfortable, and that you took no trouble to keep him happy and contented. How could you expect him to love you? What was there to love about a selfish, unsympathetic woman? What pleasure could be found in the society of a wife who did not even attempt to make herself agreeable and interesting?

Wasn't it inevitable that your husband should fall out of love with you, and find consolation in some other woman who tried to please him, and who jelled him, and that he should make up his mind to feel that he had found somebody at last who could really appreciate him? It was only like you who like you, that he should feel that he had found somebody at last who could really appreciate him.

As to what you can do, ask your husband for one year in which to try to regain your love and prove to him that you can be a good wife. If he grants it, then you must try to be a good wife for one year, but during that year it is itself to make your own living on that you must not let him know that you are doing it. It is a pity that wives can never see their husbands as they were when they first met.

My Dear Dorothy Dix—I have been engaged two years to a man who will not be ready to marry for three more years, and I fear that my fiancé has grown tired of the engagement. He neglects me. Rarely comes to see me. Always has some excuse. I am in a dilemma. I am not being able to come. I feel that I have wasted two of the best years of my life. I love him, yet I will have him and want to keep him. What should I do?

Answer:
Break the engagement at once. Break him in it, and so save your face among your friends. That is what I would do. I would break the engagement at once. Break him in it, and so save your face among your friends.

Don't try to hang on to a man who is tired of you and who is trying to get rid of you. It will be a waste of time. It will be a waste of time. It will be a waste of time. It will be a waste of time.

Believe me, my dear, you should consider yourself lucky that the young man found out that he was mistaken in his sentiments toward you before marriage. He would have been a broken man if he had married you. He would have been a broken man if he had married you.

Give the young man his freedom. Don't force him into an unhappy marriage, because no wife is so foolish as to be so. It is a pity that wives can never see their husbands as they were when they first met.

As you say, you have been married two years, and I fear that you have wasted your time. You have wasted your time. You have wasted your time. You have wasted your time.

Chances Good

If a couple lives through the first year without too many divorces, says Mr. Nutter, their chances of staying married all their lives are quite good.

They are only but two categories of couples meeting divorce. The first category is the couple who are married after a hurried courtship. The other shows the couple aged from 25 to 40, who have got separated and want another chance at happiness.

"The only marriage," says Mr. Nutter, "are the May and December marriages, probably because there is a feeling of protection as well as affection in the relation."

THE CANARY MURDER CASE

JOHN F. VAN DYKE, AUTHOR OF THE BERNARD MARSHALL CASE

"You're not on the witness stand in your own defense, Mr. Cleaver, however much you appear to regard yourself as eligible for that position."

CHARACTERS
PHIL VANCE, Attorney of New York County.
MARGARET ODELL, (THE CANARY)
CHARLES CLEAVER, a man-buster—SPOTSWOOD, a manufacturer.
LEWIS HANCOCK, an importer.
DR. AMBROSIO LINQUIST, a medical neurologist.
JOHN MARSHALL, a professional bartender.
WILLIAM ELMER JESSE, telephone operator.
JOHN HANCOCK, president of the Homeless Bureau.

THE STORY THIS FAR—
 The thing that baffles Vance most is the jewel case. It had been opened with a steel chisel
 after unsuccessfully being pried with a poker. Spotswood had gone out with Margaret Odell
 the night she was murdered.
 When he left her he told her to call a cab. They heard a scream from her room, but when they reached her they found everything was all right. The next morning she had been found strangled. Vance believed the two men in the apartment, one in a clerical dress, the other the murderer. Investigation disclosed that Cleaver had been seen with her the most, and finger-print identification pointed to the identification of John Sidel.

CHAPTER XVII
 He came up the receiver and rubbed his hands together.
 "Now they're selling," he rejoiced.
 Vance had gone to the window and stood leaning down over the "bridge of Sighs." His hands thrust into his pockets. Slowly he turned, and faced Hanco with a contemptuous eye.
 "It simply won't do, don't you know," he asserted. "You think the Dado may have tipped open the right lock, but he won't find the right shape for the rest of last evening's performance."
 Hanco was contented.
 "But being a phlegmatic," he said by the shape of his finger-print.

"A useful error in the technic of criminal approach. Regrettably," stated Vance abruptly. "The question of culpability in this case is not simple as you imagine. It is deuced complicated. And this glass of Dado and music of form whose portrait you carry next to your heart, has merely added to its intricacy."
 (Tuesday, September 11: 8 p.m.)
 Markham dined at the Buyser's club, as was his custom, and at his invitation Vance and I remained with him. He no longer figured that our presence at the dinner table would not be a waste against the intrusion of casual acquaintances; for he was in no mood for the pleasures of the table.

Hanco had begun to fall late in the evening and had turned into a slumber. Vance and I, however, did not sleep. We sat up and talked over the three of us until a neighborly knock from the next room and settled ourselves for a prolonged smoke.
 "We had been here less than a quarter of an hour when a slightly robed man, with a heavy, fluid face and his hair streaked up to us with a sinister self-assured smile, came in. Markham's jaw dropped. "That's the fellow," he said. "The fellow I told you of."
 "Who?" asked Vance.
 "The fellow I told you of," he
 said. "The fellow I told you of."
 "Who?" asked Vance.
 "The fellow I told you of," he said. "The fellow I told you of."
